2011

In the beginning, it was all about Being the Change I Wanted to See...

...before launching off into more uncharted territory. Outerspace?
Yes, indeed. But think bigger...

For Your Consideration:
Check out Tower Heist and The Sitter. Notice how there's not a hair in the film gate flying around on top of everything!
And no satellite dishes and helicopter landing pad on top of the Trump Tower either. You mean, you didn't even notice?

Excellent.

Old man Invariance awoke from hibernation in 2011, to find the kids doing #crazystuff. This grizzled oldtimer has shown renewed vigor, promoted to modest Internet stardom as Editor's Pick on the Openfilm Network and The Creator's Project Gallery.

Now, what do we have here? If you answered that you see the entirety of the Internet's knowledge of Eskimoes, condensed down to one most excellent photo composite, then you win the Grand Prize! What's the Grand Prize? Why, just the favorite dessert of Eskimoes the world over: Seal Smoothies!

Look out for a new show starring adventure eater and star chef Andrew Zimmern, coming soon (hopefully) to a TV near you!

Achieving Internet stardom is no mean feat, as I found out this year in the launch of my nascent illustration career, entering the Nowness contest, illustrating the work of Haruki Murakami. The contest, judged by the Internet herself, deemed my entry not quite worthy of the grand prize. 2012 shall see the further pursuit of Poptart Cat-level expertise in Internet.

Also to come: Portraits of People. Aspiring portrait artist seeks subjects! High potential for mangling.... sense of humor appreciated!

The Miscellaneous Photography category received a resurgence of interest, due to the availability of Shiny New Technology (iPhone).

2011 hath wringeth. Whence shall 2012 hath wring.... right. wrought?
That is a.... fine question.

And so the year closed with a Feastus Galorus of New Orleonius
King Cake Maque Choux Maximus!

Good Night!
